Arrival in Barcelona:

As an international city, Barcelona can be easily reached from almost anywhere in the world. The natural arrival point is its international airport, offering direct connections to more than 200 international destinations and a myriad of low-cost flight possibilities. However, it is also possible to get to Barcelona by train, bus, ferry, or directly by car through high-speed motorways connecting to other parts of Spain and to the French border.

By plane

The Josep Tarradellas Barcelona-El Prat Airport is located at 12 km from the city with both major and low-cost airlines. The Airport has a good connection to Barcelona, including the following options:

- Metro (L9, 32 mins): Direct line from the airport to the Campus Nord of UPC. The metro stop is Zona Universitaria. Tickets cost 5.90 €.
- Rail Transport: The Renfe commuter train ("Rodalies") leaves the airport every 30 minutes from 6.13 a.m. to 11.40 p.m. Tickets cost €5.15 and the journey to the centre of Barcelona (Sants or Plaça Catalunya stations) takes around 25 minutes. Attention: trains depart in front of terminal T2. If you arrive to terminal T1, first you have to take the free shuttle bus to T2-B.
- Bus: The Aerobus leaves the airport every 12 minutes, from 6.00 a.m. to 24.00, Monday to Friday, and from 6.30 a.m. to 24.00 on Saturdays, Sundays and public holidays. Tickets (single fare) cost 7.75€ and the journey ends in Plaza Catalunya in the centre of Barcelona.
- Taxi: From the airport, you can take one of Barcelona's typical black and yellow taxis. Unoccupied taxis display a green light and have a clearly visible sign showing LIBRE or LLIURE. The trips cost approximately 30-50€.
- Rental cars: A number of rental cars' operators can be found as well in the Airport. The city centre is reachable in 20 minutes by highway, and in less than 40 minutes by underground or train.

By train

Barcelona has an international railway station right in its city centre - the Barcelona-Sants Station.

By bus

The International Estació del Nord bus station offers connections to other parts of Spain, while low-cost companies such as Flixbus or ALSA operate at Estació del Nord station.
